Hope in Powerful Words

CHINGA LA MIGRA
VIVA LA RAZA

Chicana en Minneapolis

Hola. Soy Ángela. Soy una descendiente de inmigrantes. Vivo y trabajo en Minneapolis. Es un tiempo tan asustante y peligroso pero yo veo el poder en nuestra comunidad. Cuando perdimos un miembro de nuestra comunidad, todos activamos, gritamos y trabajamos para hacer un futuro mejor. Tengo mucha confianza en las palabras de estos autores y las palabras me dan esperanza de lo que podemos ganar. Si todavía hay arte, música y creatividad, tenemos más oportunidades para hacer cambio.

Hi. I'm Angela. I'm descended from immigrants. I live and work in Minneapolis. Times are scary and dangerous but I see the power in our community, we activate, speak out, and work to create a better future. I have faith in the words from these authors, and the words give me hope that we can win. If there is still art, music, and creativity, we have opportunities to make change.

Undocumented How Immigration Became Illegal Aviva Chomsky

It is not OK for a public park, a town, a county, or a state to discriminate regarding who is allowed to enter its space. But it's OK for a country to do that. It's not OK to treat people differently based on their religion, race, gender, or many other characteristics. But it's OK to treat people differently based on where they were born or their nationality (which is generally determined by where a person is born). US immigration laws do just that: discriminate, on the basis of nationality, regarding who is allowed to be where.

If we really want to address the problem of undocumented-ness, or so-called "illegal" immigration, we need to look more in depth at why the United States made some immigration illegal to begin with. I hope [my book shows] that the drive to illegal-ize immigration was wrongheaded from the start. It's just the latest stage in a centuries-long process of legislated inequality, a process both global and domestic.

Borderlands / La Frontera The New Mestiza Gloria Anzaldúa

The U.S.-Mexican border es una herida abierta where the Third World grates against the first and bleeds. And before a scab forms it hemorrhages again, the lifeblood of two worlds merging to form a third country—a border culture. Borders are set up to define the places that are safe and unsafe, to distinguish us from them. A border is a dividing line, a narrow strip along a steep edge. A borderland is a vague and undetermined place created by the emotional residue or an unnatural boundary. It is in a constant state of transition. The prohibited and forbidden are its inhabitants. Los atravesados live here: the squint-eyed, the perverse, the queer, the troublesome, the mongrel, the mulato, the half-breed, the half-dead; in short, those who cross over, pass over, or go through the confines of the "normal." Gringos in the U.S. Southwest consider the inhabitants of the borderlands transgressors, aliens—whether they possess documents or not. Whether they're Chicanos, Indians or Blacks. Do not enter, trespassers will be raped, maimed, strangled, gassed, shot. The only "legitimate" inhabitants are those in power, the whites and those who align themselves with whites.

No Se Raje, Chicanita Don't Give in Chicanita [excerpt]

Sí, se me bace que en unos cuantos años o siglos
La Raza se levantara, lengua intacta cargando lo mejor de todas las culturas.
Esa víbora dormida, la rebeldía, saltará.
Como cuero viejo caerá la esclavitud
de obedecer, de callar, de aceptar.
Como víbora relampagueando nos moveremos,
mujercita.
¡Ya verás!

Yes, in a few years or centuries
la Raza will rise up, tongue intact carrying the best of all the cultures.
That Sleeping serpent, rebellion-(r)evolution, will spring up.
Like old skin will fall the slave ways of obedience, acceptance, silence.
Like serpent lightning we'll move, little woman.
You'll see.
